Gau rakshaks wanted to b us alive: Gujarat dalit victi

Say They Were Thrashed For Over 2 Hours

Vijaysinh.Parmar@timesgroup.com

Rajula: Dileep Babariya, who lives at Babariyavad in Rajula town of Amreli, wakes up in the middle of the night shouting "please don't hit us, please don't hit us". The 21-year-old dalit man is yet to come out of the trauma of the near-death experience that he and six others from his community experienced at the hands of local gau rakshaks or cow vigilantes two months ago.

Dileep and six others were thrashed by a group of over 30 cow vigilantes with iron pipes, baseball bats and swords for nearly two-and-half hours on May 22. According to the victims, the gau rakshaks were planning to burn them alive in an 8-ft by 8-ft room, but were saved after some of their community members informed the police that arrived in time to rescue them.

Thirteen persons were arrested in connection with the case last week, but only after the Una Dalit atrocity came to light.

"I still can't sleep and often wake up in the middle of the night. We consider ourselves lucky as our family members came to the spot with police on time," Dileep told TOI, recalling the ordeal. He has a few stitches on his head and is yet to recover fully from the assault.

Another victim Pravin alias Ravi Zakhada recalls: "Four gau rakshaks held our hands and legs while others took turns to hit us with bats and iron rods. If we utter a single word, then they would beat us more. "If that was not enough, some of them asked their accomplices to bring kerosene to burn us alive in the small room. I saw two persons leaving the room to bring kerosene."

Ravi's father Vinubhai Zakhad came and saw that his son and others were being thrashed. He informed other community members who in turn called the police. "We had almost lost hope for our lives but police and other community members arrived just in nick of time," said Ravi who suffered fracture on his right hand. Even after two months, he is unable to walk properly because of the beating.
